FUNARTE

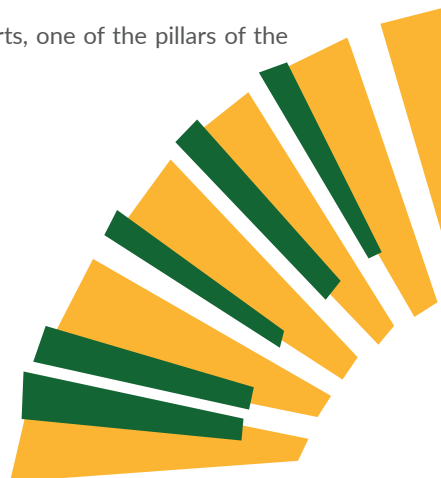

Our artists and arts professionals have been breaking boundaries and building a sensitive offensive that translates and affirms freedoms, rights, and wealth—not only economic, but also symbolic and imaginative.

For the first time, a Brazilian musician is being honored with the 'Artist Award' at this important global music event, WOMEX. Hermeto Pascoal and his work are among the treasures that must be celebrated in our Brazilian music, which is an expression of uniqueness and a tool for encounter, dialogue, and cultural connection. May public policies continue to strengthen this fundamental bond between our music and the world.

For the first time as well, the National Arts Foundation (Funarte) is participating in WOMEX, one of the most important fairs in the global music market. This initiative, carried out in partnership with Apex-Brasil, the Guimarães Rosa Institute, and Brasil Música e Artes (BM&A), is part of Funarte's Brazil International Connections - WOMEX 2024, a strategic initiative to promote Brazilian music on the international stage. The delegation, supported by Funarte, consists of 29 music professionals from all regions of Brazil.

A milestone for the internationalization of Brazilian arts, one of the pillars of the National Arts Policy.

Jonathan Ferr

Pianist, composer, filmmaker, fashion icon and dedicated consciousness raiser, Jonathan Ferr is a pioneering exponent of urban jazz in Brazil, crossing social and musical boundaries, mixing elements of hip-hop, r&b, candomblé ritual, Afro-futurism and the timeless universal African spirits invoked by John Coltrane in A Love Supreme, into his paradigm-shifting compositions. He grew up in Madureira, a suburban neighbourhood of Rio de Janeiro with a strong Black culture, but only really discovered the jazz world while a scholarship student in a Rio conservatory and going to jazz clubs in the city's metropolitan south side, wondering why he was often the only Black person there. He addresses this segregation with a category deflecting fusion of symphonic African jazz with contemporary urban attitudes, from the lyrical to the ritual, visually extending the storytelling in his short films.

His unique "universal music" explores the connections between sound, nature, and human experience, making him one of the most innovative and revered figures in global music. Celebrated for his visionary artistry, he is rightly honored as the recipient of the WOMEX 24 Artist Award.
